WELCOME BACK

For many years, Daoust was the skate that defined what performance felt like.

Before marketing slogans and carbon-fiber, Daoust built its reputation the hard way; through precision craftsmanship, perfect fit, and the quiet confidence of the players who laced them up.

In the golden years, some of the game's most iconic names trusted Daoust.

Wayne Gretzky hoisted Stanley Cups in them. Denis Savard, Maurice Richard and countless others carved out their legacies on Daoust steel. It wasn't about endorsements or brand deals; it was about trust. Daoust skates fit better, and disappeared beneath you as soon as the puck dropped.

And then for a while, Daoust went quiet. The hockey world moved on. Lighter materials, new technologies, changing trends. But the players who remembered never forgot. They talked about the way their Daoust skates hugged the foot, the natural forward pitch, the integrity and feel that today's mass-produced gear can't quite replicate.

Now, after decades away, Daoust Hockey is back. Not as a nostalgia project, but as a return to the principles that once made them the top dog. Every stitch, every contour, each material and choice of steel is driven by the same philosophy that made Daoust legendary: fit first, feel first, player first. The new Daoust skates are built for those who respect the game's roots but demand the performance of modern innovation.

This re-awakening isn't about re-creating our past. It's about carrying forward the legacy of a brand that understood something timeless: that hockey isn't just played with your hands and feet, it's played through connection. The kind you feel every stride, every shift, or every time you hear steel cutting into freshly re-surfaced ice.

Daoust is back. Reborn, and better than ever.

— Founded in 1891 —

as Daoust Lalonde in Quebec, Daoust gained a reputation for quality, fit, and excellence.

Both with their ice skates, and leather boots, the brand gained a following in the hockey world, and with those that simply sought integrity, comfort, and reliability out of their footwear.

Through the 1970s, 80s, and into the 90s, the brand became a major player in the ice hockey skate industry, as it was donned on the ice by many of the game's top players. Icons of the sport, whose involvement not only brought attention to the brand, but also signaled that Daoust's reputation was no mirage. Rather, the brand was a necessity for high-comfort, and high-performance.

While the end of the twentieth century, and beginning of the twenty-first century proved to be a quiet period for the legendary brand, the new era starts now.

TABOO

The hockey world is rife with strong traditions and customs that reflect and honor the game's past. While many of the game's standards are based on old-world necessity. Leather materials allowed mostly for blacks and dark grays to be the standard issue skate colors. In 2025, we are no longer tethered to the tradition. Enter the Taboo. An outside-the-box, eye-catching, and exceptionally designed re-imagining of the famed 301. Why blend in when you can stand out?
